INTERIM CHARGES ON PRIVACY RELEASED

Lt. Governor Dewhurst continues to release interim charges to committees of the Texas Senate to study prior to the 2015 legislative session. City-related charges relating to the protection of privacy issued for the Senate Committee on State Affairs are reprinted below. TML will continue to monitor additional charges released by the Lt. Governor and the progress of each study. We can expect the remainder of the Texas Senate committee interim charges to be released within the next month.

Surveillance: Examine possible measures to protect the personal privacy of Texas residents from governmental and commercial surveillance, including: (1) any necessary limits on warrantless search and seizure of data from electronic devices and wireless providers, including digital content and geolocational data; (2) any necessary protections against non-consented video and audio recordings collected by private handheld and wearable mobile devices and other private surveillance; and (3) any necessary limits on warrantless monitoring of the physical location of individuals through the use of biometrics, RFID chips, facial recognition, or other technologies. Examine related measures proposed or passed in other states.

Personal Data Collection: Review the types and scope of personal data collected by governmental and commercial entities and consider methods to minimize the government's collection of data on its citizens. The study should include (1) whether sufficient protections exist for DNA samples and information, including whether there should be a prohibition on the creation of DNA databases, except for felons and sex offenders; (2) methods to protect the privacy of gun owners from aggregated purchasing pattern tracking; (3) mechanisms to ensure that private health care information is properly protected; and (4) ways to ensure that previously anonymous data is not improperly re-identified and marketed. Examine related measures proposed or passed in other states.

Transparency in Data Collection: Examine possible reforms designed to increase citizens' ability to know what data is being collected about them by governmental and commercial entities and with whom that data is being shared, including an analysis of consumer informed consent. Examine related measures proposed or passed in other states.

RECENT OPEN GOVERNMENT DEVELOPMENTS IN THE THIRD COURT OF APPEALS

The Austin Court of Appeals recently addressed open government issues in two separate cases involving governmental entities. The first case of interest is York v. Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp., 408 S.W.3d 677 (Tex. App.—Austin 2013). This case involves the interplay between the Texas Public Information Act (PIA) and the Texas Open Meetings Act (TOMA). The Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corporation (TGSL) is a public non-profit corporation that is subject to both the PIA and TOMA. In 2011, attorney Larry York submitted a PIA request to TGSL. TGSL sought a decision from the attorney general that it could withhold certain records. The attorney general concluded that TGSL must disclose virtually all of the records it sought to withhold. TGSL then filed suit against the attorney general, and York intervened seeking a declaratory judgment. The district court held that TGSL was required to disclose minutes from the open meetings of its board of directors; however, they could withhold certain documents that were attached to those minutes. TGSL appealed arguing that none of the records at issue were subject to disclosure.

The Austin Court of Appeals concluded that the PIA exceptions do not limit an entity's obligation under the TOMA to disclose its "minutes" when requested. Additionally, the TOMA does not define the term "minutes." The court then states that the minutes—as well as the attachments to the minutes—fall within the definition of "minutes" and include exhibits that are referenced in and attached to the minutes. Therefore, the court held that TGSL must disclose to York its board meeting minutes, including any attachments or exhibits.

The second case deals with an open records request for recordings from closed meetings. In *Riley v. Commissioners Court of Blanco County, the Commissioners Court of Blanco County held three closed meetings to decide whether or not to purchase property in Johnson City, Texas. No. 03-11-00276-CV, 2013 WL 2348272 (Tex. App.—Austin May 23, 2013). Following the meetings, the commissioners court adopted a resolution in an open meeting to authorize the purchase of the property. Subsequent to the passage of the resolution, the plaintiff, Tex Riley, filed an open records request asking for copies of the recordings of the three closed meetings. This request was denied. In response to the denial, Riley filed a lawsuit against the commissioners court alleging violations of the TOMA and requesting that copies of the closed meeting recordings be made available to him. The district court dismissed Riley's claims and Riley appealed the decision.

The Austin Court of Appeals stated that the prohibition against filing suit against a government entity does not apply when the legislature has waived the entity's immunity. The TOMA waives immunity for violations of the TOMA and authorizes suits against governmental entities. The court concluded that the district court erred in dismissing Riley's claims, but also held that the declaratory judgment action Riley sought was redundant of the relief sought under the TOMA. The Austin Court of Appeals denied the motion for rehearing, and the Texas Supreme Court denied the petition for review. The case has been remanded back to the district court, and the Texas Municipal League will continue to monitor this case.

CITY OF SAN ANTONIO ASKS TEXAS SUPREME COURT TO REVIEW SUBSTANDARD STRUCTURE DECISION

Relying on City of Dallas v. Stewart (a 2012 opinion of the Texas Supreme Court), the Fourth Court of Appeals has recently held that a takings claim could be filed at any point "in the same proceeding" as the appeal of an administrative nuisance determination. Wu v. City of San Antonio, No. 04-10-00836-CV, 2013 WL 4084721 at *5 (Tex. App.—San Antonio Aug. 14, 2013). This is a troubling conclusion.

City attorneys had believed that statements made by the Texas Supreme Court in City of Dallas v. Stewart operated as an assurance to cities that they would not be left vulnerable to a flood of takings litigation. In Stewart, the Court recognized that state law provides a "narrow thirty-day window for seeking review" of an administrative nuisance determination. Many city attorneys believed this and other statements by the Stewart court meant that a city could continue to use the city council or building and standards commission abatement process, and protect itself from a takings claim by simply waiting until the 30-day window for appeal to pass before demolishing a structure. The Fourth Court's holding in Wu v. City of San Antonio undermines this assurance.

The City of San Antonio has asked the Texas Supreme Court to review the Fourth Court's holding, and to provide a bright-line rule as to when a takings claim may be brought. TML and the Texas City Attorneys Association filed an amicus brief with the Court on December 17, 2013, in support of the city's petition for review.
